The submarine was in American watters a little more than three hours, assuming that she continued to sea after submerging. Within that time the German coromander paid official visits to Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, commandant of the second naval district and Rear Admiral Gleaves, commander of the destroyer force of the Atlantic fiect, who was absard the flagship, the Scout cruiser Elrmingham. Both American officers returned the brief call promptly.

to bring Commander Rose ashore. The German officer came up to the city unaccompanied and first called apon Rear Admiral Knight. He remained only a few minutes

While these formalities were being exchanged, wireless messages were carrying to the ships of the British and French patrol fleet off the coast, a warning that a hostile submarine had slipped through their cordon.

There were rumors without apparent hads, that the German merchant submarine Bremen, long overdue, might be expected in the wake of the war ship. Some naval officers expressed the opinion that the fighter had escapted the Bremen across the ocean, and others that she was searching for the marchant ship. The first question asked by Captain Rose when a motorboat came alongside was "Have you all ferromes above the ships of the surface.

To naval men, the most interesting fact disclosed by Captain Rose was that he had been at sea seventeen days and still had provisions for three months; abundant fuel, and needed no repairs. Not so much as a bottle of water was taken aboard, and the ship was spick and span.

The U-53 was first sighted from land at 1:45 o'clock this faternoon, as she had o'clock this faternoon, as she was entering the inner harbor escorted by the United States submarine D-2.
